Ryan G. Wilcox is a partner at Davis Graham & Stubbs LLP, where his practice has a broad emphasis on commercial real estate transactions in Colorado and nationwide. He maintains a diverse transactional real estate practice encompassing acquisitions, dispositions, leasing, development, construction, and financing for hospitality, office, residential, retail, recreational, industrial, and mixed-use projects, including historic preservation and adaptive reuse. Ryan also assists clients with the acquisition and disposition of real estate in connection with complex mergers and acquisitions.

In Ryan's development practice, he has represented clients through every stage of development, from acquisition, entitlements, construction, financing, and leasing, through final disposition. Ryan has extensive leasing experience on both the landlord and tenant side across a broad array of asset classes and leasehold structures.

In connection with his historic preservation and conservation practice, Ryan has represented nonprofit easement holding organizations and a nonprofit loan fund to preserve, acquire, and renovate historic properties across Colorado, including the negotiation of delicate historic preservation issues on high-profile properties.

Outside the practice of law, Ryan enjoys exploring the Colorado wilderness with his wife and daughter.
